Notes on this index and collation of Queen's University Belfast, Special Collections, MS4.29

This document began in September 2019, based on observations of the binding and paper types made by Siobhán Armstrong. I started to sketch out the structure of the manuscript based on her description, and then I went through every page trying to make a transcription of all text content, and trying to identify the tunes in each musical notation. This first stage was completed in the January 2020. I had intended to go to Queen's University Belfast to look at the manuscript to confirm or add to Siobhan Armstrong's notes, but the COVID restrictions from early March 2020 got in the way. Now two years later I have finally got back to the Library and inspected the manuscript. I have also spent the last two years working closely through the pages of the digital facsimile, and have identified many more tunes and corrected many of my initial text readings.

Parts
The division of the manuscript into four parts is based on the different types of ruled music paper as observed by Siobhán Armstrong. Parts 2 and 4 both have 4-stave paper with a gap in the middle. They may originally have formed a single book. Parts 1 and 3 have music paper with equally-spaced staves, which have obviously been trimmed from larger sheets before being used. They are not all the same kind of paper, and my notes above try to indicate when the stave width or the paper colour changes. I have not made a comprehensive study of stave widths and paper types; this is just impressionistic at this stage. I have not paid very much attention to parts 2 and 4 because I believe these mainly derive from Bunting's tour of Connaught in 1792 with Richard Kirwan, and contain mainly song transcriptions. I have been focussing on understanding parts 1 and 3 which I think were used on his collecting tours in Ulster visiting harpers in summer 1792 and summer 1796.[100]

Gatherings
Siobhán Armstrong noticed some of the pages were "dirty" and suggested that they may indicate the beginnings and ends of original fascicules before they were assembled into the present volume. However, my inspection in Jan 2022 seems to suggest that there are many more separate fascicules than those indicated by the dirty pages. Many parts of the manuscript seem to be 2-leaf or 4-leaf sections. Some parts may be simply loose sheets in groups. There is evidence of perhaps two previous stab-bindings in the margins of the leaves, which are visible in the digital facsimiles but which I have not yet collated. Perhaps some of the original fascicules were originally stab-bound loose bundles. It is impossible to say without having the binding dismantled. The manuscript was last rebound in1996 according to Moloney (2000) p.341, but I have not yet been able to source any binder's notes from this.

The 1996 re-binding includes modern Japanese paper guards which have been glued to the backs of many of the sheets and gatherings to strengthen the paper and the binding. Some of these guards can be clearly seen to be gathered in a way that does not follow the earlier structure of the fascicules or pamphlets, e.g. Q 148 to 155 form a modern guarded gathering which includes the final (loose) leaf of part 2. and the first (perhaps loose) leaves of part 3.

My P numbers (e.g. P1140596) refer to a set of 34 close-up photographs which I took of the binding structure on 13th January 2022. These photograph reference numbers are given where they provide clarity or confirmation of my explanations in the left column.

Page numbers
There are four different numbering systems used to refer to pages in QUB SC MS4.29. I think the most complete way to reference a page in this manuscript is to use four numbers in the sequence B/O/Q/M, so for example we might refer to page 4/4/13/f1v. The italic numbers are not or have never been written on the pages, but are very useful for using with other references.

This is by far the easiest numbering system to use when scanning through multiple pages, because these numbers are written large in pencil on almost every page, apparently in Edward Bunting's hand. I use this page numbering system in informal use, and on my blog posts. However, there are some omissions, and some duplicates: number 125 is used for both sides of one leaf, and number 156 is used for two adjacent rectos. Some of the omissions may represent otherwise lost leaves, or they may just be Bunting's numbering errors. The stubs of cut-out pages do not correspond to gaps in Bunting's numbering system which implies he numbered the pages after removing these leaves. The first 60 or so numbers are framed with under- and overlines, but these seem not to relate to the manuscript structure. The numbers appear to have been written in one continuous

(though faulty) sequence from beginning to end of the composite volume after binding, in the early 1800s. There are internal references to this page numbering system e.g. on 99/95/104/f47r "turn back to no. 52" and on 52/48/57/f23v, "See No. 98 for ye remainder"

O (olim or old): erased page numbers
These small page numbers were presumably written into the manuscript by a librarian or cataloguer in the early 20th century. They were written in pencil in a small neat hand at the top right of every right-hand (recto) page. They are visible in digital images supplied by QUB in c.2006, and also in the online facsimile, but these numbers have subsequently been erased from the manuscript. They are referred to briefly in Moloney (2010) p.341, though she does not use them for her catalogue. These are the page numbers used by Donal O'Sullivan *(*1927-39 and 1983), and so it is necessary to know them in order to use his commentaries.

Q (Queen's): new page numbers
These numbers have been written in to the manuscript by QUB Special Collections staff since the digital images were made. These numbers are used on the online facsimile, where they are written as 3-digit numbers e.g. 052, but they are written as normal numbers into the manuscript e.g. 52. I have been writing them as 3 digit numbers, but only because I have worked so much from the online facsimiles in the past two years.

M (Moloney): Colette Moloney folio numbers
These were never written in to the manuscript as far as I am aware, but they are the primary pagination system used in Colette Moloney, The Irish Music Manuscripts of Edward Bunting (1773-1843): An Introduction and Catalogue (Dublin: Irish Traditional Music Archive, 2000). Therefore it is necessary to know the M numbers in order to look up an item in the Catalogue.

If you give a reference with just a number, e.g. "MS4.29 page 52", this could refer to three different pages, i.e. "page 52" could be 52/48/057/f23v, or it could be 56/52/061/f25v, or it could be 47/43/052/f21r.
You can be clearer by specifying which system you are using, e.g. if you want to refer to Lady of the Desert on 52/48/57/f23v you could say "B52" or "Bunting's page 52", or "Q57". Queen's style would be to write either "MS4.29.057" or "MS4/29/57" but this can be confused with Colette Moloney's style, where she uses "MS 29/57" to refer to item number 57 in her catalogue, which is Eibhlín a Rún on 59/55/064/f27r (Catalogue, 2000, p.345). I don't think we need to also know or collate her item numbers since she gives folio numbers (M) for every item in her catalogue; also these item numbers are unreliable, as some items are missed and un-numbered, while others are split between multiple numbers.

Note that "MS4" is the QUB Special Collections shelf-mark for the entirety of the Bunting Collection. Colloquially, many people have referred to "Bunting manuscript 29" or "ms29" but the proper reference is "MS4.29", and the full unambiguous reference as used by Queen's, is "Queen's University Belfast, Special Collections, MS4.29". Some style guides have specific ways of referring to libraries.

Text transcription:
I have attempted to transcribe all textual matter on all pages.
Square brackets show doubtful readings, question marks in square brackets show illegible text. Strikethrough shows deletions or crossing out. Angle brackets show editorial comments. Because the writing is so messy it is very hard to read a lot of the writing, especially the corrupt phonetical attempts to write Irish titles. Consider this a starting point; every so often I find a better reading for certain words or letters.

Tune identifications:
For each piece of music notation, I have tried to identify the tune. Tunes that have been identified have been given a normalised title and where possible, a reference number, both written in bold text.

I am identifying tunes by finding similar versions either in Bunting's later developed piano arrangements, or in other early published books or manuscripts, or in the living tradition of Irish music. I am very hesitant to give a tune a title purely on the basis that Bunting has written words above the notation in this manuscript, because he often seems to write unrelated titles above his notations here. Tunes marked "unidentified tune" are ones that I have not yet found anywhere else.

I have worked through many of the tunes in detail, with a broad focus on the harp transcriptions. I have given references to my website for each of the tunes I have written up in detail. Many of these posts also include PDF typeset music notation and machine audio of the manuscript notation as well as detailed commentary and cross-references.

Tune reference numbers
The reference numbers beside tune titles are intended to assist cross-referencing and further research, though the identifications and commentaries in the referred sources are often not very reliable. But it is a way of keeping control of different tunes sharing a title, or different titles referring to the same tune.

DOSB numbers indicate tunes appearing in Donal O'Sullivan, The Bunting Collection of Irish Folk Music and Songs (Journal of the Irish Folk Song Society, 1927-39). Numbers from 1 to 66 correspond to the numbering of tunes in Edward Bunting, A General Collection of the Ancient Irish Music (Preston & Son, London, 1797). Numbers from 67 up correspond to unnumbered tunes in Edward Bunting, A General Collection of the Ancient Music of Ireland (Clementi & Compy, London, 1809). Tunes with a letter suffix (e.g. DOSB 89a) were printed by Donal O'Sullivan as comparative material to the tune under discussion, and are generally not tunes that were published by Bunting.

MOSB numbers indicate tunes appearing in Donal O'Sullivan with Mícheál Ó Súilleabháin, Bunting's Ancient Music of Ireland edited from the original manuscripts, (Cork University Press, 1983). Numbers from 1 to 151 correspond to the numbering of tunes in Edward Bunting, The Ancient Music of Ireland (Hodges and Smith, Dublin, 1840). Numbers from 152 up correspond to unnumbered tunes in Bunting (1840) introduction.

DOSC numbers indicate tunes appearing in Donal O'Sullivan, Carolan the Life Times and Music of an Irish harper (London, Routlege & Kegan Paul, 1958), though many of these tunes have spurious attributions and so the presence of a C number does not necessarily indicate that this is a Carolan tune.

N numbers indicate tunes copied from John and William Neal, A Collection of the most Celebrated Irish Tunes proper for the violin, German Flute or Hautboy… (Dublin, 1724). The numbers are as given in Nicholas Carolan, ...facsimile edition (Irish Traditional Music Archive, Dublin, 2010).

Where I have found a version of the tune only in other sources, either historical collections or present-day living tradition, I have given a normalised title but no number.

Tune descriptions:
I have tried to describe the type of notation. These descriptions are inevitably subjective and are sometimes given a question mark to show the categorisation is uncertain.

I have used "transcription" for a notation which seems to have been written at speed as a direct response to the live performance of a harper or other performer. I have sub-categorised the transcriptions according to what is shown; "dots" for note-heads only; "notes" for dots with stems and beams; "bars" for bar-lines, and "full" for transcriptions including beamed notes and bars (though usually lacking time or key signatures).

I use "copy" to refer to a notation written as a copy of another notation, whether the exemplar is a printed book, a manuscript notation or a recent live transcription. I think of a notation as being a copy, when the tune is neatly written, the note heads are spread out, where there is a time signature or key signature supplied, or when there are accidentals marked. There is definitely a grey area of sketchy copies or neat transcriptions. When I have been able to identify the source of a copy I have inserted this in the description.

I use "arrangement" to mean a notation where chords have been added in a creative process from outside the oral tradition.

Margins of sheets
"i" means there is a margin on the inside of the book, with the staves running to the outer edge of the pages.
"o" means a margin on the outside with the staves running into the centre.
"b" means the margin is at the bottom edge of the page.

Number of music staves
"2+2" indicates a sheet with four staves, grouped in pairs with a wider gap in the middle.
"4.x" and "5.x" are used to indicate sheets with a partial trimmed staff at the top of the page.
There are also some differences in the stave spacing and paper types but I have not systematically worked through these.

Alignment of staves

I have used little symbols to try and indicate the vertical alignment of the staves in the inner margins of facing pages. This can indicate whether a pair of pages might represent a folded sheet or not. My icons should be read as stylised illustrations turned through 90°

This indicates that the staves on each side of the centre fold line up, and this pair of pages may be a folded sheet

This indicates that the left page of the opening has its staves at a lower level than the right page. This opening seems unlikely to be a single folded sheet.

This indicates that the right page of the opening has its staves at a lower level than the left page, and again it is unlikely that this opening is a folded sheet.

49 The Taylor done over is an English-language song. See for example The Taylor Done Over… the words by Mr. Harriss London printed for J. Bland No. 45 Holborn (words and tune) https://books.google.co.uk/books?id=2gc_0PwfgyoC
50 Andrew Carey, Andrew Kerr, Andrew Carr. Widely disseminated in 18th century printed collections.
51 Giolla na Sgriob also sometimes titled "Kate Kearney" after Lady Morgan's song. In Murphy (p.12) this tune appears under the title Kate Martin. In the late 1830s Bunting says he collected the tune from the harper Catherine Martin of Virginia Co. Cavan. See my Tune List Spreadsheet for references.

52 Sláinte an Chupáin (DOSB 105) was collected by Bunting from Richard Kirwan of Creggs Co Galway in 1792 according to ms33(3)p63 and 1840 intro p96 (DOSB citation)
53 Breedeen Padrick in ms33(1) p.20 is a related tune.
54 Seanduine Críonna in ms33(2) p.18 "from … at Mr Cuffe's Deel Castle Ballina". Title in 1809 "Is Casgaire ar Loch – The Fisherman" (recte. Iascaire). The related tune in 1840 "Is Iascaire ar Loch Ceara Mé" is said to have been noted from Mrs Burke of Carrowkeel, Co. Mayo, 1792.
